SUPREME COURT RULING IN WILSON WILL CASE

BENEFITS DIVIDED AS VERDICT IS RENDERED BY TEXAS HIGHEST COURT

The Supreme Court of Texas has denied a writ of error asked for by John W. House in the case of Mrs. Kate Rogers and others, against John W. House and others in a suit involving disposition of certain land by the late Mrs. Lizzie B. Wilson. In this instance the Court affirmed the Court of Civil Appeals at Austin.

The case originated in District Court here. Mr. House lost the verdict and took an appeal. One tenth of 612 acres of land given Mr. and Mrs. John W. House was given Mrs. Kate Rogers and others in the trial court, slightly more than 61 acres. A portion of the land given to Mr. and Mrs. House, formerly given to Dee Wilson under the terms of the will was denied the appelants. It follows as a result of the court's ruling that Mr. and Mrs. House will lose about 40 acres of land.

That portion of the suit involving Jeff T. Kemp as executor of the will of Mrs. Lizzie B. Wilson and the Southwestern University of Georgetown was decided in favor of the executor and the University.

The litigation involving this will originated some years ago. John W. House was raised in the Wilson home and was a large beneficiary in the will of the deceased pioneer. In the disposition of the property Mr. and Mrs. House received the old home and a large body of land.

BENEFITS DIVIDED AS VERDICT IS RENDERED BY TEXAS HIGHEST COURT

The Supreme Court of Texas has denied a writ of error asked for by John W. House in the case of Mrs. Kate Rogers and others, against John W. House and others in a suit involving disposition of certain land by the late Mrs. Lizzie B. Wilson. In this instance the Court affirmed the Court of Civil Appeals at Austin.

The case originated in District Court here. Mr. House lost the verdict and took an appeal. One tenth of 612 acres of land given Mr. and Mrs. John W. House was given Mrs. Kate Rogers and others in the trial court, slightly more than 61 acres A portion of the land given to Mr. and Mrs. House, formerly given to Dee Wilson under the terms of the will was denied the appelants. It follows as a result of the court's ruling that Mr. and Mrs. House will lose about 40 acres of land.

That portion of the suit involving Jeff T. Kemp as executor of the will of Mrs. Lizzie B. Wilson and the Southwestern University of Georgetown was decided in favor of the executor and the University.

The litigation involving this will originated some years ago. John W. House was raised in the Wilson home and was a large beneficiary in the will of the deceased pioneer. In the disposition of the property Mr. and Mrs. House received the old home and a large body of land.

Odd New Zealand Bird, Kiwi, Nears Extinction

The strangest bird in the world—the kiwi-kiwi, is described as follows in Boys' Life, the Boy Scout publication.

"Native of New Zealand, he nearly makes fact of ancient fable—current when the continent was first discovered—that everything around Australia was upside down. The kiwi is practically wingless and completely flightless. He has no visible tail. His brownish plumage, moreover, because the feather-filaments are disunited, looks more like coarse hair. His nostrils, unlike any other bird's, are at the very tip of the long beak, that is flexible and very sensitive to touch.

"The kiwi growls like a dog, and snaps his bill as you crack your fingers; he can hiss like a cat when angry. His extraordinarily powerful legs can give mighty kicks, not backward but forward, and have been known to break a bone in a man's hand. In small flocks, the few kiwis left of a disappearing species inhabit New Zealand's hilly forests. Females burrow long tunnels, laying in a nest at the very end of it two large eggs—eggs a quarter the length of the whole bird. Incubating is entirely the job of the male.

"Maoris are very fond of kiwi flesh broiled or roasted, so fond that the bird was well hunted out before ever a white man saw one. Now the peculiar bird, distant relative of ostrich, emu, cassowary, and survivor of a species that flourished with the extinct, gigantic dinornis and fierce, sluggish moas, millions of years ago, is fast approaching extinction."

Marriage Promise Just Incident of Vacation?

A New Yorker, lifted out of his habitual caution by the balmy atmosphere of Florida during a winter vacation, brought suit against a girl he met down there, to recover a ring. The young lady contested the suit.

When it came up in court, the young man said that they had enjoyed a fond good-by on the beach, but later, when both had returned to New York, the girl had passed him up cold. The girl herself admitted it, saying:

"I really didn't know whether I should recognize him or not. Our acquaintance in Florida was really very slight."

"But," expostulated the court, glancing at the sparkling ring, "you promised to marry him, didn't you?"

"Why, yes," admitted the girl, "but that was all."—Los Angeles Times.

Europe's "Holy Alliance"

The Holy Alliance was the name of a league formed by Russia, Austria and Prussia after the fall of Napoleon in 1815 for the purpose of regulating the affairs of Europe "by the principles of Christian charity," says an article in Pathfinder Magazine. Notwithstanding its professed purpose the real policy of the Holy Alliance was to make every endeavor possible to stabilize existing dynasties and to resist all change. The league endured until 1830 and was in time joined by all the important and European monarchs except those of England and Turkey. The Monroe Doctrine was enunciated largely to warn the Holy Alliance not to interfere with the newly established republics in Latin America.

Biblical Flowers

There are comparatively few flowers named in the Bible. It is reported that as a whole the Syrian people were not particularly fond of flowers. Among those named are the myrtle, Isaiah, 4:13; Rose of Sharon, Isaiah, 35:1; Song of Solomon, 2:1; lily, I Kings, 7:26; Son of Solomon, 2:16, 6:23; Matthew, 6. Flax is found in Exodus, Genesis, Leviticus, Esther, Judges, Proverbs and Kings. Burning bush (or acacia) is mentioned in Exodus, 3:4. The lily is an Arabic general term and applies to the tulip, ranunculus, narcissus, iris, water lily, and particularly the anemones which carpet the ground during the summer season throughout Palestine.

Treasure Trove on Farm

On the land of a widow farmer of Aarhus (Denmark) 6,000 copper and silver coins of the days of Eric Glipping (1259-1286), king of Denmark, were found. It was in the reign of this king that the first rigsdag, or general assembly, became an established legislature in Denmark. The coins, as treasure trove, were by law the property of the state, but the widow received a sum of money in exchange.

Only Daddy

Elizabeth Ann's mother was telling the little girl and her small brother the story of Cinderella. Suddenly there came a knock from the front door.

"Go see who's there," said her mother. "Maybe it's the fairy prince."

Elizabeth Ann hurried from the room. "No, it isn't a fairy prince," she called back, disappointedly from the hall. "It's only daddy!"

Big Business

John, age eight, had just been promoted to 3A. One day when he came home he was telling his mother about their new organization; that they had elected a president, vice president and such. Mother asked what the object of the organization was and after a moment John replied:

"To promote better citizenship."

SMILES AT DEATH

Here Is The Story of One Who Copes With Exactions of the Age

Dave Tudor of the LaPort Jewelry Store at Newkirk, Oklahoma, is an optimist, a cynic and a humorist, if all these may be combined in one man. At any rate, he wrote a letter recently to a friend which made what would have been a dark day, sparkle with sunshine—and it wasn't because of a check enclosed. Judge for yourself.

'My present financial condition is due to the effect of the Federal laws, state laws, county laws, brother in laws and outlaws that have been foisted upon an unsuspecting public. Through these various laws I have been held up, held down, sat on, walked on, flattened, squeezed, and broke until I do not know what I am, where I am or why I am.

'These laws compel me to pay merchant's tax, capital tax, auto tax, incorporation tax, real estate tax, property tax, dog tax, gas tax, light tax, water tax, cigarette tax, school tax, syntax, liquor tax and carpet tax.

'In addition, I am requested and required to contribute to every society and organization that the inventive mind of man can invent; give to the Society of St. John, John the Baptist, the Women's Relief, the Navy League, the Children's Home, the Policeman's Benefit, the Dorcas Society, the Y. M. C. A., the Gold Diggers' Home; also to every hospital and charitable institution in town the Red Cross, the Black Cross and the White Cross, the Purple Cross, the Flaming Cross and the Double Cross.

'The government has so governed my business that I do not know who owns it. I am suspected, expected, inspected, disrespected, examined, condemned and compeled until all I know is that I am supposed to provide an inexhaustible supply of money for every known and unknown need desire or hope of the human race. Because I refuse to donate to all, then go out and beg, borrow or steal the money to give away, I am ousted, cussed, discussed, boycotted and talked to, talked about, held up, held down and robbed until I am just about ruined.

'The only reason that I am clinging to life at all is to see what the hell's coming next.'

Great Writers of Past Had Fondness for Cats

Byron was fond of cats; in his establishment at Ravenna he had five of them, writes Helen M. Winslow in "Concerning Cats." Daniel Maclise's famous portrait of Harriot Martineau represents that estimable woman sitting in front of a fireplace and turning her face to receive the caress of her pet cat crawling to a resting place upon her mistress' shoulder.

Baudelaire, it is said, never could pass a cat in the street without stopping to stroke and fondle it. "Many a time," said Champfleury, "when he and I have been walking together, have we stopped to look at a cat curled up luxuriously in a pile of fresh white linen, reveling in the cleanliness of the newly ironed fabrics."

Professor Huxley's notorious fondness for cats was a fad which he shared with Paul de Koch, the novelist, who, at one time, kept as many as 30 cats in the house. Many descriptions of them are to be found scattered through his novels. His chief favorite, Fromentin, lived 11 years with him.

Pierre Loti has written a charming and most touching history of two of his cats—Moumette Blanche and Moumette Chinoise—which all true cat lovers should make a point of reading.

Science Offers Weapon for Survival of Man

Science will help man to survive beyond the fate of many extinct species that have been conquered by their environment. The most powerful method yet devised, says Dr. Roscoe R. Spencer writing in Hygeia Magazine, is in the weapon of science.

Man is confronted with the problem of adapting himself successfully to his environment before the environment overpowers him, says Doctor Spencer. Research alone will enable man to discover the laws of nature so that he may adapt himself, and in science lies the heart and soul of research.

While the average person has only the vaguest ideas concerning the workings of scientific men, science is not at all to be left to the highly gifted few, Doctor Spencer continues. The average person is capable of accomplishing much by the scientific method of trial and error in research. Doctor Spencer invites his readers to bring the scientific methods into their everyday life and to benefit by its use.

Cold Cream Long Popular

Don't let this jar your cold cream, girls. But, "believe it or not," that indispensable cosmetic of present-day femininity has been keeping the wrinkles from milady's face for more than 2,000 years. So says Charles Whitebread, curator of the division of medicine at the National museum in Washington. What is more, he says it is the second oldest of all pharmaceutical preparations. And do you girls know who "invented" your old standby? To quote Curator Whitebread "the fragrant unguent has changed very little from the original formula for unguentum refrigerans ceratum, invented and prescribed by the Roman physician Galen, sometimes known as the 'father of pharmacy.' "—Pathfinder Magazine.

"Pieces of Eight"

This coin is a Spanish piece that circulated freely in this country in Colonial and Revolutionary times and the coin to which we owe the adoption of the dollar as the unit of our currency. It had become the custom in many places, especially in the South, to price goods, keep accounts and make collections in "Spanish milled dollars," the name under which the old "pieces of eight"—eight reals—were known in the Colonies. When we came to have a currency of our own we took the piece of eight, or Spanish dollar, as our unit and divided it into a hundred cents.

The End Alone Counts

John Bright once declared of his party, "We shall win in the long run." And they did. It is the win in the long run that is life's best win.

The runner, who wins the first lap is a good runner, but he who stays on and keeps at his running and wins the last is the best runner. The boxer who wins the fight is he who wins in the long run.

A chapter in a life may be tragic, but if the end is happy, what does it matter? It is the end that counts.—London Chronicle.

Cure for Convulsions

The following was taken from a recent report by a nurse in one of the cities of New York state:

"While taking a history of a prenatal mother I asked the mother what was the cause of a previous child's death; she replied that it died of convulsions. I then inquired if she knew what to do for convulsions. She answered immediately, saying 'stand with the baby in your left arm with back to the stove, remove baby's shirt and throw it over your shoulder into the fire.' "—Health News.

Too Big to Ask

Robert insisted that his younger brother be sent on an errand to a neighbor's.

"Why don't you want to go?" inquired his mother.

"I went to the grocery for her. She said she was going to make cookies today and Junior will get 'em, if he goes, I'm too big to ask."

KEEPING KISSABLE

The key to a series of advertisements now being published by a certain brand of cigaret and directed to the female trade is 'Keep Kissable.' R.r. has a bit of advice to offer to young ladies along this line. When the manufacturer suggests that smoking his cigarets will keep you kissable he means of course, for you to keep yourself so that the men will want to kiss you, to get right down to the vulgar depth of the suggestion. The originator of that slogan is trying to mislead you, my dear young friends, in the name of the almighty dollar. If, in fact, it is your ambition to make yourself attractive to your gentlemen friends, the place to go to find out how to do this is not to some high powered cigaret manufacturer but to the men themselves. Ask them if you are more attractive to them with a cigaret in your mouth, be it Old Strike, Lucky Golds or Chestermills. He may lie to you in the name of modernism. He may tell you that it makes no difference to him or that he admires your spunk. But down in their heart, ninety-nine out of a hundred of them harbor a secret disgust. If you mean nothing to him except a passing pleasure, what difference does it really make to him if you smoke. But let the time come for him to seek a wife and then see whether or not he picks the girl who has all of these little characteristics which he has professed to regard indifferently or with favor. It may appear on the surface that the modern boy has changed his ideals of a worthy wife but it is still noticeable that they still exercise quite a bit of sound judgment and forget some of their most intimate playmates when they get ready to settle down to the seriousness of married life.—Ramrod Ramblings in Robstown Record.

Mary Pickford In "Kiki" Milam Theatre Tuesday & Wednesday

To 'America's Sweetheart' herself is due the choice of the international stage success 'Kiki' as her latest United Artists screen offering which comes to the Milam Theatre Tuesday and Wednesday.

It has been said 'that from curls to coiffure,' in other words, in any of her many roles, 'Mary Pickford has always been the screen symbol of romantic girlhood.' Tiring of the stiff formalities of society conventions as represented by so many screen stories the famous star searched the whole world of plays for a central figure that would enable her to play her earliest type of role, that of a lovable mischievous madcap, hoydenish, roguish, brimming over with energy, love and determination to 'get her man.'

That Kiki represents a harum-scarum, gamin-like imp, who aspires to be a great lady, a great actress, and to win the heart of the manager o f the company in which she has a small part, is but the barest indication, a slight sketch, of the full-length portrait of Kiki that Miss Pickford has added to her gallery of charming heroines.

The famous play, as adapted by Sam Taylor, celebrated as a screen writer and director of the star in 'My Best Girl,' 'Coquette' and 'Taming of the Shrew,' in which 'Doug' and Mary co-starred, is great fun, and swift and sparkling entertainment. 'Kiki' is a vehicle for laughter. No matter how serious the situation may be for the characters involved, the complications, and the dialogue as well, are always screamingly funny to the audience.

The play stands the true test of light comedy in that the situations and comic relief are sustained by a solid ground-work of dramatic incident, through which the heart interest runs as a gleaming thread.

The settings, comprising among others, a theatre stage and a magnificent private apartment, are luxuriously and lavishly produced from original designs by William Cameron Menzies, the supervising art director.

A perfectly balanced cast of distinguished players has been assembled by Miss Pickford and Director Taylor. It is headed by the popular Reginald Denny, chosen from among a score of Hollywood's leading men, as the ideal type of romantic and engaging personality to portray Kiki's hero. He plays the company manager upon whom the madcap's heart is set.

Margaret Livingston, Titian-haired beauty of 'Innocents of Paris,' is cast as Kiki's rival. Joseph Cawthorn, celebrated musical comedy star, has a mad wag character role, and other important parts are taken by Fred Walton, Phil Tead and Edwin Maxwell. An unusual ensemble, in ability, experience and previous accomplishments.

Kiki's bizarre ideas of costume and correct behavior contribute much hilarity, and the feminine members of the play within a play are gorgeously gowned under Miss Pickford's personal supervision. From all advance notices, America's Sweetheart may well look forward to another glorious screen triumph.

Desert Explorers Find Odd Things of Interest

The Libyan desert expedition in search of the lost oasis of Zerzura under the leadership of Major Bagnold, returned to Cairo unsuccessful, so far as its primary object was concerned. The expedition discovered northeast of Owenat a remarkable circle of stones standing three feet high and nine yards across, similar in formation to Stonehenge. This circle is in the desert 150 miles from the nearest water. They then returned to Selima, and for the first time the journey was made across the desert to Assiut on the Nile by way of the Kharga oasis, following the northern part of the Arabian way—the old slave trade route from Darfur to Assiut, altogether over 1,000 miles long, which used to be traversed by camels in about 40 days, the distance from Selima to Assiut being about 420 miles. Major Bagnold stated that the slave track was clearly marked by the skeletons of camels, and that there were over 200 camel skeletons to every mile. Although it had not been used for 50 years, in certain parts the tracks of the camels were plainly visible.

Mankind Never Able to Change Nature of Cat

It seems that the house cat of today behaves in much the same manner as it did in the bygone ages. The animal's association with man has not changed its habits in one particular. It goes about in its own way and takes its own time and all efforts to make it take some part in the operations of the household have failed. The animal resents any interference with its coming and going. Miss A. S. Firkins, of Columbia university, has put the cat to an intelligence test. Seventy-eight cats were secured from a pet show and put through a series of tests. The first problem put before the cats was how to reach food placed inside an inclosure. Most of the cats solved this by stepping upon a plate which opened the way. The problems were then increased in difficulty, the hardest being one which required the cats to touch seven plates, one after the other, to get the food. Only two of the contestants were smart enough to do this. One of the conclusions arrived at was that male cats are smarter than the females.

Sailors' Refuge

Robert Richard Randall was the founder of Snug Harbor. Randall was a sea captain who retired from the sea in the late Eighteenth century and settled down on a large farm on the edge of which is now Greenwich village. When he died he left his property to an institution known as Sailors' Snug Harbor for Ancient and Decrepit Seamen. His relatives did all they could to break the will, but in 1831, over thirty years after the captain's death, the Supreme court upheld the bequest. In the meantime the city of New York had grown so enormously that the trustees decided it would be better to lease the land contained in the Randall farm and locate the seamen's home on Staten island. At the time of the captain's death or prior, his farm brought in an annual income of about $4,000; at the time the trustees made the change it was yielding $40,000. Today it is estimated that the annual earnings of the property are about $4,000,000.

Bowling Old Pastime

Bowling has been played for centuries in Germany and the Low Countries, where it is still in high favor, but attains its greatest popularity in the United States, whence it was introduced in Colonial times from Holland. The Dutch inhabitants of New Amsterdam, now New York, were much addicted to it, and from 1623 to 1840 it was played on the green, the principal resort of the bowlers being the square just north of the Battery, still called Bowling Green. The first covered alleys were made of hardened clay or of slate, but the modern alleys are built up of strips of pine or maple wood, about 1 by 3 inches in size, set on edge, and fastened together and to the bed of the alley, the surface being carefully leveled and polished.

Old-World Melody

A New Yorker in London was strolling past Lincoln's inn, one of the old domiciles, which figures in Charles Dickens' "Bleak House." Out of the old building came familiar strains of music.

Meditating, as he walked, on the old-worldliness of this inn built centuries ago, the tune was slow in identifying itself.

It wasn't until the last line of the song that the words came to mind. They were, "I'll never go there any more," and the song, of course, was the one that starts: "The Bowery, the Bowery."

Babylonian Lawgiver

Hammurabi was the most illustrious of all the Babylonian kings. He was the sixth of the Amoritic or West Semitic dynasty and reigned 43 years between 2067 anw 2025 B. C. Hammurabi promulgated for use throughout his empire one of the greatest legal codes ever devised. A fairly complete copy of the code was found about the Twelfth century at Susa inscribed on a diorite stela eight feet high. Apparently the stone had been taken to Elam as plunder by invaders during the later period of Babylon's decline.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Great Writers of Past Had Fondness for Cats

Byron was fond of cats; in his establishment at Ravenna he had five of them, writes Helen M. Winslow in "Concerning Cats." Daniel Maclise's famous portrait of Harriot Martineau represents that estimable woman sitting in front of a fireplace and turning her face to receive the caress of her pet cat crawling to a resting place upon her mistress' shoulder.

Baudelaire, it is said, never could pass a cat in the street without stopping to stroke and fondle it. "Many a time," said Champfleury, "when he and I have been walking together, have we stopped to look at a cat curled up luxuriously in a pile of fresh white linen, reveling in the cleanliness of the newly ironed fabrics."

Professor Huxley's notorious fondness for cats was a fad which he shared with Paul de Koch, the novelist, who, at one time, kept as many as 30 cats in the house. Many descriptions of them are to be found scattered through his novels. His chief favorite, Fromentin, lived 11 years with him.

Pierre Loti has written a charming and most touching history of two of his cats—Moumette Blanche and Moumette Chinoise—which all true cat lovers should make a point of reading.

Science Offers Weapon for Survival of Man

Science will help man to survive beyond the fate of many extinct species that have been conquered by their environment. The most powerful method yet devised, says Dr. Roscoe R. Spencer writing in Hygeia Magazine, is in the weapon of science.

Man is confronted with the problem of adapting himself successfully to his environment before the environment overpowers him, says Doctor Spencer. Research alone will enable man to discover the laws of nature so that he may adapt himself, and in science lies the heart and soul of research.

While the average person has only the vaguest ideas concerning the workings of scientific men, science is not at all to be left to the highly gifted few, Doctor Spencer continues. The average person is capable of accomplishing much by the scientific method of trial and error in research. Doctor Spencer invites his readers to bring the scientific methods into their everyday life and to benefit by its use.

Cold Cream Long Popular

Don't let this jar your cold cream, girls. But, "believe it or not," that indispensable cosmetic of present-day femininity has been keeping the wrinkles from milady's face for more than 2,000 years. So says Charles Whitebread, curator of the division of medicine at the National museum in Washington. What is more, he says it is the second oldest of all pharmaceutical preparations. And do you girls know who "invented" your old standby? To quote Curator Whitebread "the fragrant unguent has changed very little from the original formula for unguentum refrigerans ceratum, invented and prescribed by the Roman physician Galen, sometimes known as the 'father of pharmacy.'"—Pathfinder Magazine.

"Pieces of Eight"

This coin is a Spanish piece that circulated freely in this country in Colonial and Revolutionary times and the coin to which we owe the adoption of the dollar as the unit of our currency. It had become the custom in many places, especially in the South, to price goods, keep accounts and make collections in "Spanish milled dollars," the name under which the old "pieces of eight"—eight reals—were known in the Colonies. When we came to have a currency of our own we took the piece of eight, or Spanish dollar, as our unit and divided it into a hundred cents.

The End Alone Counts

John Bright once declared of his party, "We shall win in the long run." And they did. It is the win in the long run that is life's best win.

The runner, who wins the first lap is a good runner, but he who stays on and keeps at his running and wins the last is the best runner. The boxer who wins the fight is he who wins in the long run.

A chapter in a life may be tragic, but if the end is happy, what does it matter? It is the end that counts.—London Chronicle.

Cure for Convulsions

The following was taken from a recent report by a nurse in one of the cities of New York state:

"While taking a history of a prenatal mother I asked the mother what was the cause of a previous child's death; she replied that it died of convulsions. I then inquired if she knew what to do for convulsions. She answered immediately, saying 'stand with the baby in your left arm with back to the stove, remove baby's shirt and throw it over your shoulder into the fire.'"—Health News.

Too Big to Ask

Robert insisted that his younger brother be sent on an errand to a neighbor's.

"Why don't you want to go?" inquired his mother.

"I went to the grocery for her. She said she was going to make cookies today and Junior will get 'em, if he goes. I'm too big to ask."

KEEPING KISSABLE

The key to a series of advertisements now being published by a certain brand of cigaret and directed to the female trade is 'Keep Kissable.' R.r. has a bit of advice to offer to young ladies along this line. When the manufacturer suggests that smoking his cigarets will keep you kissable he means of course, for you to keep yourself so that the men will want to kiss you, to get right down to the vulgar depth of the suggestion. The originator of that slogan is trying to mislead you, my dear young friends, in the name of the almighty dollar. If, in fact, it is your ambition to make yourself attractive to your gentlemen friends, the place to go to find out how to do this is not to some high powered cigarett manufacturer but to the men themselves. Ask them if you are more attractive to them with a cigaret in your mouth, be it Old Strike, Lucky Golds or Chestermills. He may lie to you in the name of moderism. He may tell you that it makes no difference to him or that he admires your spunk. But down in their heart, ninety-nine out of a hundred of them harbor a secret disgust. If you mean nothing to him except a passing pleasure, what difference does it really make to him if you smoke. But let the time come for him to seek a wife and then see whether or not he picks the girl who has all of these little characteristics which he has professed to regard indifferently or with favor. It may appear on the surface that the modern boy has changed his ideals of a worthy wife but it is still noticeable that they still exercise quite a bit of sound judgment and forget some of their most intimate playmates when they get ready to settle down to the seriousness of married life.—Ramrod Ramblings in Robstown Record.

PULPIT PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH SUNDAY NIGHT

Jackson and Patsy Lyon are the speakers. They will discuss the conference held at Kerrville during the last ten days. Rev. O. C. Acrey will preach at the morning service.

Restless, could not sleep

"THERE were days when I felt like I could not get my work done. I would get so nervous and 'trembly' I would have to lie down. I was very restless, and could not sleep at night.

My mother advised me to take Cardui, and I certainly am glad she did. It is the first thing that seemed to give me any strength. I felt better after the first bottle. I kept it up and am now feeling fine."—Mrs. T. R. Gibson, Fort Payne, Ala.

Mary Pickford In "Kiki" Milam Theatre Tuesday & Wednesday

To 'America's Sweetheart' herself is due the choice of the international stage success 'Kiki' as her latest United Artists screen offering which comes to the Milam Theatre Tuesday and Wednesday.

It has been said 'that from curls to coiffure,' in other words, in any of her many roles, 'Mary Pickford has always been the screen symbol of romantic girlhood.' Tiring of the stiff formalities of society conventions as represented by so many screen stories the famous star searched the whole world of plays for a central figure that would enable her to play her earliest type of role, that of a lovable mischievous madcap, hoydenish, roguish, brimming over with energy, love and determination to 'get her man.'

That Kiki represents a harum-scarum, gamin-like imp, who aspires to be a great lady, a great actress, and to win the heart of the manager of the company in which she has a small part, is but the barest indication, a slight sketch, of the full-length portrait of Kiki that Miss Pickford has added to her gallery of charming heroines.

The famous play, as adapted by Sam Taylor, celebrated as a screen writer and director of the star in 'My Best Girl,' 'Coquette' and 'Taming of the Shrew,' in which 'Doug' and Mary co-starred, is great fun, and swift and sparkling entertainment. 'Kiki' is a vehicle for laughter. No matter how serious the situation may be for the characters involved, the complications, and the dialogue as well, are always screamingly funny to the audience.

The play stands the true test of light comedy in that the situations and comic relief are sustained by a solid ground-work of dramatic incident, through which the heart interest runs as a gleaming thread.

The settings, comprising among others, a theatre stage and a magnificent private apartment, are luxuriously and lavishly produced from original designs by William Cameron Menzies, the supervising art director.

A perfectly balanced cast of distinguished players has been assembled by Miss Pickford and Director Taylor. It is headed by the popular Reginald Denny, chosen from among a score of Hollywood's leading men, as the ideal type of romantic and engaging personality to portray Kiki's hero. He plays the company manager upon whom the madcap's heart is set. Margaret Livingston, Titian-haired beauty of 'Innocents of Paris,' is cast as Kiki's rival. Joseph Cawthorn, celebrated musical comedy star, has a mad wag character role, and other important parts are taken by Fred Walton, Phil Tead and Edwin Maxwell. An unusual ensemble, in ability, experience and previous accomplishments.

Kiki's bizarre ideas of costume and correct behavior contribute much hilarity, and the feminine members of the play within a play are gorgeously gowned under Miss Pickford's personal supervision. From all advance notices, America's Sweetheart may well look forward to another glorious screen triumph.

Desert Explorers Find Odd Things of Interest

The Libyan desert expedition in search of the lost oasis of Zerzura under the leadership of Major Bagnold, returned to Cairo unsuccessful, so far as its primary object was concerned. The expedition discovered northeast of Owenat a remarkable circle of stones standing three feet high and nine yards across, similar in formation to Stonehenge. This circle is in the desert 150 miles from the nearest water. They then returned to Selima, and for the first time the journey was made across the desert to Assiut on the Nile by way of the Kharga oasis, following the northern part of the Arabian way—the old slave trade route from Darfur to Assiut, altogether over 1,000 miles long, which used to be traversed by camels in about 40 days, the distance from Selima to Assiut being about 420 miles. Major Bagnold stated that the slave track was clearly marked by the skeletons of camels, and that there were over 200 camel skeletons to every mile. Although it had not been used for 50 years, in certain parts the tracks of the camels were plainly visible.

Mankind Never Able to Change Nature of Cat

It seems that the house cat of today behaves in much the same manner as it did in the bygone ages. The animal's association with man has not changed its habits in one particular. It goes about in its own way and takes its own time and all efforts to make it take some part in the operations of the household have failed. The animal resents any interference with its coming and going. Miss A. S. Firkins, of Columbia university, has put the cat to an intelligence test. Seventy-eight cats were secured from a pet show and put through a series of tests. The first problem put before the cats was how to reach food placed inside an inclosure. Most of the cats solved this by stepping upon a plate which opened the way. The problems were then increased in difficulty, the hardest being one which required the cats to touch seven plates, one after the other, to get the food. Only two of the contestants were smart enough to do this. One of the conclusions arrived at was that male cats are smarter than the females.

Sailors' Refuge

Robert Richard Randall was the founder of Snug Harbor. Randall was a sea captain who retired from the sea in the late Eighteenth century and settled down on a large farm on the edge of which is now Greenwich village. When he died he left his property to an institution known as Sailors' Snug Harbor for Ancient and Decrepit Seamen. His relatives did all they could to break the will, but in 1831, over thirty years after the captain's death, the Supreme court upheld the bequest. In the meantime the city of New York had grown so enormously that the trustees decided it would be better to lease the land contained in the Randall farm and locate the seamen's home on Staten island. At the time of the captain's death or prior, his farm brought in an annual income of about $4,000; at the time the trustees made the change it was yielding $40,000. Today it is estimated that the annual earnings of the property are about $4,000,000.

Bowling Old Pastime

Bowling has been played for centuries in Germany and the Low Countries, where it is still in high favor, but attains its greatest popularity in the United States, whence it was introduced in Colonial times from Holland. The Dutch inhabitants of New Amsterdam, now New York, were much addicted to it, and from 1623 to 1840 it was played on the green, the principal resort of the bowlers being the square just north of the Battery, still called Bowling Green. The first covered alleys were made of hardened clay or of slate, but the modern alleys are built up of strips of pine or maple wood, about 1 by 3 inches in size, set on edge, and fastened together and to the bed of the alley, the surface being carefully leveled and polished.

Old-World Melody

A New Yorker in London was strolling past Lincoln's inn, one of the old domiciles, which figures in Charles Dickens' "Bleak House." Out of the old building came familiar strains of music.

Meditating, as he walked, on the old-worldliness of this inn built centuries ago, the tune was slow in identifying itself.

It wasn't until the last line of the song that the words came to mind. They were, "I'll never go there any more," and the song, of course, was the one that starts: "The Bowery, the Bowery."

Babylonian Lawgiver

Hammurabi was the most illustrious of all the Babylonian kings. He was the sixth of the Amoritic or West Semitic dynasty and reigned 43 years between 2067 anw 2025 B. C. Hammurabi promulgated for use throughout his empire one of the greatest legal codes ever devised. A fairly complete copy of the code was found about the Twelfth century at Susa inscribed on a diorite stela eight feet high. Apparently the stone had been taken to Elam as plunder by invaders during the later period of Babylon's decline.—Pathfinder Magazine.

METHODIST CHURCH

Fisher, the lay leader of the church will be in charge and will arrange his own program; we ask for him the best of cooperation of our people. At the 8 p. m. hour Rev. J. B. Hardigree the pastor of the First Christian church will preach and we are inviting all of his people to worship with us; we appreciate the kindness of Bro. ### Nothing Modern About Liking for "Flip-Jacks"

Mardi Gras jollification in old England reached a climax at noon on Shrove Tuesday when the so-called Pancake bell was rung from the parish church tower, signaling a rush for frying pan and batter on the part of the village goodies, and general feasting and rejoicing of Tom, Dick, and Harry over successive batches of pancakes until far into the night.

In the words of a Seventeenth century chronicler: "Shrove Tuesday there is a bell wrung, call'd the Pancake bell, the sound whereof makes thousands of people distracted and forgetful either of manners or humanitie. Then there is a thing called wheaten floure, which the cookes do mingle with water, eggs, spice, and other tragicall, magicall enchantments, and then they put it by little and little into a frying pan of boiling suet, where it makes a confused dismall hissing, untill at last by the skill of the cooke, it is transformed into the form of a flip-jack, call'd a pancake, which ominous incantation the ignorant people do devoure very greedilie."

By which it will be seen that there is nothing new under the sun, and that flapjacks are prepared and consumed now in much the same fashion that flip-jacks were in the Seventeenth century.

South Dakota's "Lost Lode"

Finding of the "Lost Lode" in the Black Hills of South Dakota recalls the way in which trace of this tremendously rich fissure of gold was lost more than 50 years ago. Frank Welsh, a cattleman, was hunting deer near where gold first was discovered in 1874. He sat down on a rock to rest and idly began breaking a piece of white quartz. Suddenly the quartz split, revealing a nugget of coarse gold.

He hurried back to Custer and was grubstaked by Matt and Jack Daly to work the claim. Welsh knew nothing about mining, but he found the quartz vein, rigged up a primitive crusher and washed out about $50 a day. But he cut across the vein, instead of following it, so finally he had to quit. While he had still been getting gold out of it he had turned down $60,000 for the claim.

"Dance of Death"

The word "macabre" signifies "pertaining to the danse macabre," or the "Dance of Death." This was a favorite allegorical representation in the art, literature and pantomime of Europe in the Middle ages. Death was represented as a skeleton leading other skeletons or living dancers to the grave. According to the Century dictionary, the name is probably derived from that of an obscure German poet who wrote dialogues of death. Other authorities attribute it to the Arabian word "makabir" for "cemetery" or to the name of some painter of the allegory. It is pronounced mahabr, the first "a" as in "ask," the second "a" as in "arm," and with second syllable accented.

Quietude of Hotels Inspiration to Genius

Hotel rooms are becoming increasingly popular as workshops for playwrights, novelists, poets and magazine writers, according to Margaret A. Barnes, president of the National Hotel Housekeepers association. More and more, the best sellers among plays and books are being written in hotels.

The reason, according to Mrs. Barnes, is the perfect privacy which is offered by the modern hotel. "If a person really wants solitude, there's no better place to find it," she says in the American Magazine. "Here is a self-contained work room, as serene and isolated as though it was a tower shut off by a moat—as secluded as a hermit's cave on a mountain top. For instance, in the detached quietude of the busy New York hotel where I work, there have been hundreds of musical scores, plays, books and short stories produced during the past year.

"When anyone comes under our care that we know is creating something special like that, everybody takes the greatest pride in making the service just right to help along the muse. Days go by when we scarcely see the inspired one. Sometimes just a gentle tapping of the typewriter is all that tells what is going on.

"Oftener than not we never know just how good or how unworthy the child is that has been born under such circumstances."

Tides in Various Parts of Old and New World

Not in many parts of the world do the tides rise over 25 feet. The highest are the spring tides at the head of the Bay of Fundy, on the coasts of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, where they reach 70 feet. In the Santa Crux river, Argentina, the rise is 40 feet, and at Cape Virgin, in the Straits of Magellan, they reach an equal height. In the Bristol channel, England, 44 feet is attained; along the Welsh coast, 36 feet; at Liverpool, 26 feet; at St. Malo, France, 35 feet. At no place in the Orient or along the African coast or our own western coast are any such heights reached. Bombay's high tide is 17 feet; Surat, the highest in India, 19 feet. At the other extreme is Trincomalee, Ceylon, where the neap tide reaches a height of only one foot. The highest in the United States is at Eastport, Maine, 20½ feet.

Gibraltar Buildings

Old Captain Mainbrace had retired from the sea, and determined to invest his savings in building houses.

Of course, he had his own ideas on the matter, and would not take the builder's advice. So the houses were put up overlooking the sea, but high up on a hill where they were very difficult of access.

When they were finished he called his confidential servant and said: "Now, my hearty, what shall I call them?"

The servant hesitated and then replied: "Well, sir, I should call them Gibraltar buildings."

"What do you mean?" roared the old captain.

"Because," said the man, "they say that Gibraltar will never be taken, and shiver my timbers if these ever will."

FIREMEN'S BARBECUE

Great Patriotic Society Formed in Revolution

The Society of the Cincinnati is an hereditary patriotic society organized in 1783 by the American and foreign officers of the Continental army assembled in their cantonment on the Hudson river near Fishkill, N. Y. The original meeting was held in the Verplanck house, then the headquarters of Baron Steuben. The objects of the society were: "To perpetuate as well the remembrance of the Revolution as the mutual friendships which have been formed under the pressure of common danger. . . ." Since most of the officers were returning to their farms, which they had left to fight for the republic, they named their organization the Society of the Cincinnati, after their Roman prototype, Lucius Quintus Cincinnatus. George Washington was the first president general. He was elected in 1787 and re-elected until his death. Presidents general succeeding him have been Alexander Hamilton, C. Cotesworth Pinckney, Thomas Pinckney, Aaron Ogden, Morgan Lewis, William Popham, H. A. S. Dearborn, Hamilton Fish, William Wayne and Winslow Warren. The state societies meet annually and the general society meets once in every three years. The living hereditary members number 980. The emblem symbolizes the union of France and America.

Unlike Many Prophets, These Two Were Right

The centenary of the death of Henry Bell, that erratic genius responsible for the introduction of steam navigation on the Clyde, has passed. On the trial trip of the Comet, Bell is reported to have declared: "Wherever there is a river . . . throughout the world there will speedily be a steamboat." Similarly Robert Stephenson, who foresaw the development of that other means of transport—the railway—and whose name is ever associated with the Liverpool and Manchester railway, which was opened more than one hundred years ago, while sitting in a Stockton inn, told his son and John Dixon: "I venture to tell you I think you will live to see the day when railways will supersede almost all other methods of conveyance in this country. What I have said will come to pass, as sure as you live." Both of these prophets lived to see the fulfillment of their prophecies.

Legends of Empedocles

Empedocles lived in royal style, surrounded by all the pomp and pageantry great wealth could procure. He was exceedingly kind to the poor and gave large sums to succor them. He also provided dowries for scores of poor young virgins to enable them to secure husbands.

Empedocles studied medicine and became a really great physician for the time. He was brought to a woman who had lain for seven days as if dead. "She can, and will, remain in that state, without eating or breathing, for thirty days," declared Empedocles. He was right. She did. At the end of that time he restored her to full life and vigor.—Exchange.

Old Anglo-Saxon Word

Minster, meaning a Christian religious house, is from an Anglo-Saxon word, mynster, meaning the same thing. In the nomenclature of the English church, it means an abbey, or the monastic building of a religious society. In the term Westminster abbey, the word abbey is superfluous, for minster means the same thing, and is so used in York minster, meaning the abbey church at York. It is generally agreed that Westminster was so called because it was west of St. Paul's. The present abbey is the abbey of St. Peter, but is called Westminster because built on the site of the old Westminster.

Change With Weather

Some hygroscopes are not mechanical; they owe their hygroscopic properties to their color, which changes with the state of humidity of the air by reason of the application of sympathetic inks. These instruments are often composed of a flower or a figure, of light muslin or paper, immersed in the following solution: Cobalt chloride, 1 part; gelatin, 10 parts; water, 100 parts. The normal coloring is pink. This color changes into violet in medium humid weather and into blue in very dry weather.—Washington Star.

Chinese God of Destiny

The image of the famous Chinese God of Destiny before which the young are taught to pray is rather a terrifying object with its great glaring eyes, and open mouth full of sharpened teeth. He is regarded as a friend, however. The young are taught to kneel and pray for light for their future guidance. The abode of this idol is the famous 501 temple in Pekin, so-called because of that number of images housed therein and where the Chinese repair for worship.

Compromise

The mother of a four-year-old youngster had been obliged to resort to disciplinary measures to suppress the cavortings of her offspring. When bedtime arrived, the sensibilities of the child continued to show signs of injury.

"Kiss mother, honey," suggested the mother as she tucked the covers about her daughter.

"All right, mamma, I still love you. But I don't like you," firmly announced the little one.

Individualism Most Vital Heritage Says Speaker To Editors

'The industrialization which Texas needs is one that will make ready for market her farm products and natural resources. As such, it must reckon with practically every activity in the state and particularly with those pertaining to agriculture in all of its ramifications,' declared John W. Carpenter, president of the Texas Power & Light Company, in an address before the annual convention of the Texas Press Association in San Angelo.

'That is one of the responsibilities which rests squarely on the shoulder of the Fourth Estate. The press must sound the call and lead the way where public opinion and public ideals are concerned,' continued Mr. Carpenter, and he urged 'we need to guard individualism as our most vital heritage. Whatever progress the United States has made, whatever prosperity State of Texas has won, has been under a regime of private enterprise. Governments can not effectively suspend the workings of economic law. Where they have tried, state socialism, with failure immeasurably worse has been the result.'

Mr. Carpenter sounded a warning against government ownership when he cautioned 'there is a danger in government ownership in that it sooner or later comes to rest at our own doorstep. One form of control, ownership or meddling leads to another. Presently we have an interminable, and expensive, 'House that Uncle Sam Built.' If we are to have government made fertilizer, why not government made farm machinery? Why are we not justified in government-owned flour mills, canneries, wholesale houses and grocery stores? How can we discriminate between 'essential public services'? We all require roofs over our heads, therefore let us Big Stick into line the lumber, brick, tile and cement industries. We must have food, therefore we are justified in walloping or bodily taking over the flour mills, the canneries, the packers, the wholesalers, the jobbers and retailers.

'The Power Trust seems to be the subject for current agitation,' continued Mr. Carpenter. 'The electric industry has evidently been singled out for the honor of attack because so many people are benefitting by it and because electric service comes so cheap. There must be something wrong with a business that attacts so large a patronage, charges such low rates, and yet pays regular dividends to its stockholders. It's unreasonable, they say. But if you will pardon the suggestion, perhaps it is the accusers who are unreasonable.

'You, who are interested in the growth and prosperity of Texas, will look beyond this dollars and cents comparison to the even more important function that the private electric company is performing in the development of the industries of this state. It is well to remember this fact, when through sensational outpourings, ambitious political demagogues try to delude the people into the belief that the industry which has given Texas these facilities is a detriment to the state. The remarkable growth of this nation has not been by accident. It has been the result of a great human principle that can be expressed in five words—'Individual Reward for Individual Merit.' Either this nation is to remain what it has been—a nation in which the government is to be conducted by the people and the people are free from th paralyzing blight of government competition, or it has to become something else not contemplated by its founders.'

Wise Reader Will Not Spoil Joy in New Book

One should read a book in the way he goes through a strange town in his car, Charles E. Tracewell writes, in the Washington Star. He does not stop the vehicle at the court house, and launch forth into a public denunciation of the architect who created the structure.

He does not assemble a gathering of the natives in the square and proceed to tell them that the traffic regulations of their one-horse town are vile, their streets badly in need of repair and their mayor evidently a sap of the first water.

No, he does nothing of the kind. He may see all these things and he may want to be so assertive, but the chances are exactly 100 to nothing that he will merely keep his eyes and ears wide open, be interested in everything he sees and hears and go on about his business, that of getting out of town to the next one.

Reading a new book is somewhat similar. A book is a journey, which, once taken, can never be taken again in its exhilarating newness, its pristine colors, its excitement, its vividness, its commonplace drama.

No matter how fine a book may be, or how much one may enjoy its second reading, or its third or fourth reading, there can never be but one first time with it, and, this being true, one is a fool to spoil it by talking, or snoring, or fuming, in his own behalf.

Native Irish Costumes Before Queen Elizabeth

Writing of the native costume of Ireland in the early days, "Costume Throughout the Ages" says: "Since Elizabethan days the dress of the Irish has had little to distinguish it from that worn in England, but before the time of that queen who, like Henry III, made many laws pertaining to the clothing of her subjects, Irishmen wore kilts similar to those of the Scotchman, accompanied by leggings laced in by string tipped with bronze, shoes of brown leather, and a pleated linen shirt. Over all was a sleeveless loose cloak that was long and made of bright-colored wool. Some wore a fitted coat, much like the present-day frock coat with tight sleeves, no collar, and a broad girdle at the waist. . . . The women wore a linen undergarment and over this long gowns of the same material, dyed saffron, or a costly fabric imported from the continent. Their long capes had hoods attached. In jewelry, they wore bracelets, pins, brooches, rings, and torques about their necks. Today, modern Continental dress is found in all parts of Ireland, all traces of the old dress having disappeared."

Tribe of Smiling People

The Samoans are a happy race. They are smiling all the time except when they are laughing and it takes very little to make them laugh. A large group of native stevedores toiling under the torrid sun were thrown into convulsions by the sight of a tractor which they were taking from the hold. They concluded it was some new kind of an automobile with a single seat. The Samoan has little or nothing to worry him and hence his jovial disposition. His food grows all about him and his clothing demands are quite limited. A clean garment of bright colors and some cheap jewelry make a well-dressed woman and the young children wear no clothes at all. There are many short and sudden showers, but as a rule the climate is warm and sunny and the temperament of the people seems to be the same.

Glaciers and Electricity

Changing sizes of glaciers are of practical as well as scientific importance, and hence for many years elaborate measurements have been made of them, partly under government auspices, says Nature Magazine. There is an international glacier commission, founded in 1894, which collects such measurements from all countries and publishes them every year. The Swiss government is especially interested in watching the variations of glaciers, because they affect the flow of the mountain streams upon which Switzerland depends for generating electricity. Systematic observations of glaciers are also valuable as a means of anticipating disastrous avalanches and floods.

Ancient Pewter

What is believed to be the oldest piece of pewter in existence is on exhibition at Field museum in Chicago. It is an inscribed tablet bearing in Chinese a date indicating the year A. D. 85. It was found in a tomb in Lo-Yang, province of Honan, China. This pewter is a relic of the Han dynasty and is executed as a deed, or grant of land, for the burial place of the governor of Tungkun, who was a great scholar highly esteemed by his contemporaries, according to Dr. Berthold Laufer, curator of anthropology.

You Win

A Connecticut citizen, who has played anagrams for a "good spell," writes wrathfully to the Wall Street Journal that he was cheated out of the county anagram championship by the ignorance of the judge, who holds down the lexicographer's easy chair at "the Corners" general store. "He claimed," fumes the correspondent, "there is no such word as 'zloty'; I say there is. Am I right?" "Absolutely, old sport," assures the editor. "A 'zloty' is a Polish coin, designed, no doubt, for slot machines."

SURGEON GENERAL

General Patterson saw overseas service in 1917-1918, and since August, 1930, has been surgeon of the Hawaiian department.

Wise Reader Will Not Spoil Joy in New Book

One should read a book in the way he goes through a strange town in his car, Charles E. Tracewell writes, in the Washington Star. He does not stop the vehicle at the court house, and launch forth into a public denunciation of the architect who created the structure.

He does not assemble a gathering of the natives in the square and proceed to tell them that the traffic regulations of their one-horse town are vile, their streets badly in need of repair and their mayor evidently a sap of the first water.

No, he does nothing of the kind. He may see all these things and he may want to be so assertive, but the chances are exactly 100 to nothing that he will merely keep his eyes and ears wide open, be interested in everything he sees and hears and go on about his business, that of getting out of town to the next one.

Reading a new book is somewhat similar. A book is a journey, which, once taken, can never be taken again in its exhilarating newness, its pristine colors, its excitement, its vividness, its commonplace drama.

No matter how fine a book may be, or how much one may enjoy its second reading, or its third or fourth reading, there can never be but one first time with it, and, this being true, one is a fool to spoil it by talking, or snoring, or fuming, in his own behalf.

Native Irish Costumes Before Queen Elizabeth

Writing of the native costume of Ireland in the early days, "Costume Throughout the Ages" says: "Since Elizabethan days the dress of the Irish has had little to distinguish it from that worn in England, but before the time of that queen who, like Henry III, made many laws pertaining to the clothing of her subjects, Irishmen wore kilts similar to those of the Scotchman, accompanied by leggings laced in by string tipped with bronze, shoes of brown leather, and a pleated linen shirt. Over all was a sleeveless loose cloak that was long and made of bright-colored wool. Some wore a fitted coat, much like the present-day frock coat with tight sleeves, no collar, and a broad girdle at the waist. . . . The women wore a linen undergarment and over this long gowns of the same material, dyed saffron, or a costly fabric imported from the continent. Their long capes had hoods attached. In jewelry, they wore bracelets, pins, brooches, rings, and torques about their necks. Today, modern Continental dress is found in all parts of Ireland, all traces of the old dress having disappeared."

Tribe of Smiling People

The Samoans are a happy race. They are smiling all the time except when they are laughing and it takes very little to make them laugh. A large group of native stevedores toiling under the torrid sun were thrown into convulsions by the sight of a tractor which they were taking from the hold. They concluded it was some new kind of an automobile with a single seat. The Samoan has little or nothing to worry him and hence his jovial disposition. His food grows all about him and his clothing demands are quite limited. A clean garment of bright colors and some cheap jewelry make a well-dressed woman and the young children wear no clothes at all. There are many short and sudden showers, but as a rule the climate is warm and sunny and the temperament of the people seems to be the same.

Glaciers and Electricity

Changing sizes of glaciers are of practical as well as scientific importance, and hence for many years elaborate measurements have been made of them, partly under government auspices, says Nature Magazine. There is an international glacier commission, founded in 1894, which collects such measurements from all countries and publishes them every year. The Swiss government is especially interested in watching the variations of glaciers, because they affect the flow of the mountain streams upon which Switzerland depends for generating electricity. Systematic observations of glaciers are also valuable as a means of anticipating disastrous avalanches and floods.

Ancient Pewter

What is believed to be the oldest piece of pewter in existence is on exhibition at Field museum in Chicago. It is an inscribed tablet bearing in Chinese a date indicating the year A. D. 85. It was found in a tomb in Lo-Yang, province of Honan, China. This pewter is a relic of the Han dynasty and is executed as a deed, or grant of land, for the burial place of the governor of Tungkun, who was a great scholar highly esteemed by his contemporaries, according to Dr. Berthold Laufer, curator of anthropology.

You Win

A Connecticut citizen, who has played anagrams for a "good spell," writes wrathfully to the Wall Street Journal that he was cheated out of the county anagram championship by the ignorance of the judge, who holds down the lexicographer's easy chair at "the Corners" general store. "He claimed," fumes the correspondent, "there is no such word as 'zloty'; I say there is. Am I right?" "Absolutely, old sport," assures the editor. "A 'zloty' is a Polish coin, designed, no doubt, for slot machines."

ANNOUNCEMENT PARTY

June weddings and plans for summer vacation lend interest to society. A charming function of Tuesday afternoon was a dual bridge and forty-two party given by Mesdames Charlie McDermott, Conn Moody and W. D. Bigbee, at the home of the later at four o'clock.

Yellow and green were the prevailing colors in decorating using the Shasta daisy, cannas and maidenhair fern in baskets, vases, wall pockets and containers, that were placed at attractive points throughout the home. The reception and dining rooms were particularly pretty where the chosen flowers made beauty and shed fragrance. Amid this environment four tables of bridge players and one of forty-two were gathered, dressed in summer frocks that presented an attractive scene.

Table accessories for games carried out the chosen colors and score pads were colonial ladies in the chosen theme.

A pretty cookie jar was given Miss Mary Lake Henderson for high trophy, for bridge and Mrs. Carl Black was presented with a Frigidaire set in green for making highest score in forty-two.

Errors Coupled With Bases On Balls Cost Firemen Game

The Temple Cowboys invaded Cameron Sunday afternoon and were handed the game on a platter by the Firemen. The final score being four to three. As for earned runs the game should have ended Firemen 3, Cowboys one. Errors by the Firemen coupled with bases on balls gave the visitors three of their four runs. Keith and Young contributed the five errors.

Alford and Hunt each struck out one opponent while Alford allowed three bases on balls. Two of these Cowboys who had gone to first on bases on balls scored. The only extra base hit of the game was a two bagger by Rose.

The double play in the seventh, Seago to Lee to Honeycutt was the fielding classic of the day. Two other killings were ruined when the runners from first base knocked the props from under the second baseman in both instances, ruining the double plays.

Liberty Beats K. of C. Team

Liberty after losing to Splawn 7 to 5 came back in the second game and gave the Knights a 12 to 6 lacing. Mortimer of Liberty was tight with hits and only allowed 6. Ernest Michalka of the Knights seemed the one that solved Mortimer's offerings the best by getting two hits, one a home run. Lud Matula and Parma hit long doubles which netted three runs. Ted Matula was the starting pitcher was relieved by Ladis Matula and later by Schigut. Seemed that errors played a prominent part for the Knights.

Old-World Melody

A New Yorker in London was strolling past Lincoln's inn, one of the old domiciles, which figures in Charles Dickens' "Bleak House." Out of the old building came familiar strains of music.

Meditating, as he walked, on the old-worldliness of this inn built centuries ago, the tune was slow in identifying itself.

It wasn't until the last line of the song that the words came to mind. They were, "I'll never go there any more," and the song, of course, was the one that starts: "The Bowery, the Bowery."

Babylonian Lawgiver

Hammurabi was the most illustrious of all the Babylonian kings. He was the sixth of the Amoritic or West Semitic dynasty and reigned 43 years between 2067 anw 2025 B. C. Hammurabi promulgated for use throughout his empire one of the greatest legal codes ever devised. A fairly complete copy of the code was found about the Twelfth century at Susa inscribed on a diorite stela eight feet high. Apparently the stone had been taken to Elam as plunder by invaders during the later period of Babylon's decline.--Pathfinder Magazine.

SUNNY SIDE

While Alford outpitched Hunt as far as hits were concerned yet Alford allowed three bases on balls. Two of these walks were converted into runs. To add to the misery the Firemen made five errors while Lee, shortstop for the Cowboys, made one which did no harm.

The heavy hitters of the Firemen seem to be hypnotized by the slow curves of the lefthander Hunt. McDonald was up four times and did nothing, while Egan Vogelsang got one hit during the afternoon.

Two singles followed by two sacrifices netted the Cowboys their first run in their first time at bat. In the third inning they scored two runs on one hit coupled with an error. In the ninth a base on balls, an error and a single by the Cowboys proved to be the winning run of the game.

Cameron is now fourth in the Temple cup race, being in a tie with Holland. Killeen and the Cowboys are further up the column.

Several Firemen fell in the hitting column of averages, while Jenness, Alford, Pepper Young and Egan Vogelsang made some little advances.

Next Sunday, June 21, the Waco Packers will be seen in action at our park and this promises to be one of the best games of the year.

The Fourth of July game at Cameron was awarded to Rogers for the coming Fourth. Last year on the same date these teams were matched to play at the Rockdale Fair. It was won by Cameron, so this year the Rogers boys will do their utmost to even the score.

Not a stolen base was made by the Firemen Sunday while the opponents were pilfering three. Cameron left six men on the paths, the Cowboys left eleven.

Monday morning the Firemen tried to get games with either Holland or Killeen but neither of these cared to play Cameron. Then Rogers was called and games were booked with the Rogers boys for Friday, July 3 and also the following day, Saturday, July 4. On Sunday, July 5 the Hilltop Bakery team of Waco will be here for a double header. Cameron has never yet hooked up with this team but they reputedly have a very strong team.

This coming Sunday, June 21, the Waco Packers will invade Cameron for a game. This gives every promise to be a bitterly fought game but these are the kind we are trying to give the fans. The first half of the schedule in the Temple Telegram races finishes up with the games of Sunday, June 21.

In the games Sunday with the Cowboys the visitors batted at a .228 clip and fielded .977 while the Firemen batted a .389 and fielded .900. The errors, bases on balls and dumb base running cost the Firemen their game.

The 'heavy artillery' of the Firemen failed to function. The Firemen failed to get an extra base hit and stole nary a base. The only extra wallop of the game was the two bagger by Lee of the Cowboys.

Jenness batted in one of the Firemen runs while Heinie Walker batted in the other two. Lee, Russell and Rose (2) batted in the visitor's runs.

Hunt and Alford struck out only one opponent each but Alford walked three men. Two of these that obtained free trips to first scored later.

Lee and Rose sacrificed in the first inning to score the Cowboy's first run. The Cowboys also pulled the only double play of the game, Seago to Lee to Honeycutt in the seventh inning.

McDonald, Williams, Walker, Keith and Thompson lost a few points each off their batting averages while Jenness and Egan Vogelsang put on a few more points.

George Sumrall of Bell county has been added to the pitching staff of the Firemen and he will be a big help to the team.

Umpire McElroy of Rogers has been secured to umpire the games at Cameron. He has been seen in action here in recent years and his work was always of par excellent quality, both with the teams and the fans. Some of the fans vehemently voiced their disapproval of several decisions Sunday afternoon in our game with the Cowboys.

Errors Coupled With Bases On Balls Cost Firemen Game

The Temple Cowboys invaded Cameron Sunday afternoon and were handed the game on a platter by the Firemen. The final score being four to three. As for earned runs the game should have ended Firemen 3, Cowboys one. Errors by the Firemen coupled with bases on balls gave the visitors three of their four runs. Keith and Young contributed the five errors.

Alford and Hunt each struck out one opponent while Alford allowed three bases on balls. Two of these Cowboys who had gone to first on bases on balls scored. The only extra base hit of the game was a two bagger by Rose.

The double play in the seventh, Seago to Lee to Honeycutt was the fielding classic of the day. Two other killings were ruined when the runners from first base knocked the props from under the second baseman in both instances, ruining the double plays.

Ripe Tomatoes Are Yielders of Good Food Products Agent Shows

Tomato Juice

Tomato juice is not a by-product and for that reason it should be made from choice tomatoes and put up immediately after gathering. Sort and wash carefully, trim and core out green bitter portion of tomato. There are two methods of extraction: preheating before extracting juice; extracting juice from cold tomatoes. Extracting by cold method will probably be the better in the home, since you get a bright good color, raw tomato flavor and very little separation—that is a division of the solids and liquids in the juice. After juice has been extracted heat to simmering, fill into cans or jars. Seal at once. Process at boiling temperature for 15 minutes for pints or No. 1 cans.

Vegetable Soup Mixture

One quart tomato pulp, 1 pint corn or 1 pint lima beans, 1 pint each of peas, snap beans, okra, 1 cup chopped onion and 1 1-2 teaspoons salt.

Cook together tomatoes and onions and to remove seed put through a sieve, then cook to consistency of catsup. Add corn and other vegetables, which have been prepared for canning. Bring to boil and pack hot. Process No. 2 cans 30 minutes at ten pounds pressure.

Chicken Gumbo

One fat chicken, 4 or 5 pounds, 6 medium sized onions, 6 pounds tomatoes, 3 tablespoons butter, 3 tablespoons lard, 2 bay leaves crushed, 4 to 6 pepper-corns, 2 red pepper pods chopped, 1-2 teaspoon thyme, salt to taste, 5 pounds okra, 6 tablespoons parsley, 2 cups chopped celery 2 quarts boiling water. Fry chicken in butter all but liver.

Remove and put into boiling water. Simmer until meat slips from bones. Chop celery and onion fine. Put celery, onions and okra in frying pan and brown lightly, combine with tomatoes and seasonings. Cook until tomatoes and okra are almost done. Cut meat into inch lengths. Strain stock, combine all materials, heat to boiling point, fill into No. 2 cans and process at 15 pounds for 45 minutes. When serving use steamed rice moulded in cup with chicken gumbo poured around it.

SUMMER GARDENING

Summer is here and we are likely to feel that we had just as well let the garden go. But don't do that. Someone has said that this is an unusual year. Let us make it more unusual as far as gardens go.

Now that the mustard, greens, radishes, English peas and other short lived vegetables have served their time, I suggest that you clear them out, use them for chicken feed. In their place plant, long necked squash okra, egg plant, bell pepper, butter beans, cream and black eyed peas. The cream peas are heavier yielders than the black eyes.

Now for storage. Don't start to digging those Irish potatoes until the tops are dead. They should be plowed out, allowed to dry for a few minutes, then picked up immediately and placed in a cool, dry place, with ample ventilation and preferably dark. Take out all the damaged ones. A false floor made of saplings will provide underventilation. Four or five inch trees are cut and laid one way across smoke house or crib, then smaller saplings, one and one-half inches in diameter are laid crosswise. Spread potatoes in one layer over poles.

Onions should not be harvested until the tops have fallen over. They should be pulled and piled for two days in shady place. After this place in crates or well ventilated boxes, in dark cool place.

Dust your tomato plants for blister bugs with Barium Fluosilicate to five parts lime. Dust thoroughly.

Don't forget that the secret of summer gardening is thorough and frequent shallow cultivation. If water is not available this alone will carry through long periods of drought. Our gardens need cultivation more often than they need water.

MINNIE BARTHOLOMEW
County Home Demonstration Agent

SUMMER GARDENING

Summer is here and we are likely to feel that we had just as well let the garden go. But don't do that. Someone has said that this is an unusual year. Let us make it more unusual as far as gardens go.

Now that the mustard, greens, radishes, English peas and other short lived vegetables have served their time, I suggest that you clear them out, use them for chicken feed. In their place plant, long necked squash okra, egg plant, bell pepper, butter beans, cream and black eyed peas. The cream peas are heavier yielders than the black eyes.

Now for storage. Don't start to digging those Irish potatoes until the tops are dead. They should be plowed out, allowed to dry for a few minutes, then picked up immediately and placed in a cool, dry place, with ample ventilation and preferably dark. Take out all the damaged ones. A false floor made of saplings will provide underventilation. Four or five inch trees are cut and laid one way across smoke house or crib, then smaller saplings, one and one-half inches in diameter are laid crosswise. Spread potatoes in one layer over poles.

Onions should not be harvested until the tops have fallen over. They should be pulled and piled for two days in shady place. After this place in crates or well ventilated boxes, in dark cool place.

Dust your tomato plants for blister bugs with Barium Fluosilicate to five parts lime. Dust thoroughly.

Don't forget that the secret of summer gardening is thorough and frequent shallow cultivation. If water is not available this alone will carry through long periods of drought. Our gardens need cultivation more often than they need water.
